Mr. and Mrs. Hen are the people to do the work properly, and Rural New Yorker calls attention to the way this thing is done in England. A little handense on wheels, large enough for 85 hens, is hanled about from one part of the field to another. Wherever it stops the hens clean up all the scattered wheat for many rods in overy direction. They come back to the house to sleep and lay. All the farmer has to do is to move the house and gather the eggs. The hous do tho rest. There is progress for you. On many an Americau wheat farm the hens could make the waste wheat worth a good deal of mouey.

the greatest figure of speech that God has put in the form of ugreater than the menutains, larger and grander to man than any plain of land—thu sea—shall tell him the importance of thin inner life of righteousness as he grows late a righteous life and into righteous deeds and ideals.

And first of all the great teaching of the sen seems to lie in the fact that large nud yast as is, the ocean, magnificant as are its currents, and splendid and beactiful as are little, it is bound by two shores that are virtually one that far on the west, and the voice of the sea sobs itself into wailings, or wills itself into n tunnit of agony, or whis itself into n tunnit of agony, or whispers its own peace to the great slars, this shore and that share are but fragments of one feet—that righteonsness lies between with all its possibilities and its hopes.

John Stnart Mill.

John Stnart Mill, standing on this shore with a theology which for n long time had been driving English thinker inf any sensitiveness of son and righteonsness of heart into skepticism, stood herv in thu midst of the plantannayorie of time, fost all the sweetness of man's boart, knew nil the beauty of a child's life, saw through his tears the unystery and tragedy of life, and he said: "If God is what they tell me he is, in uither is not pewerful enough to have his own way, or he is not good enough. These things I canuet believe, and if the least that sweep with all their mysterious music through uty out here, are not true over vender. It was a dreadful thing, but it was the healthiest moment for modern when man standing out his shore looked across that whole mystery that we call righteousness and said: "If the laws that I feel here, the impulses that I bow to here, the fact that sweep with all their mysterious music through uty out here, are not true over vender." It was a dreadful thing, but it was the hore when man standing out his shore looked.

It is trun that youder horison of clouds as they run across the blue give to the sen its wondrous light not shallow and the marvel of color that is here. There lies the vast mother of pearl of the morning, covered with mist, stretching far out youder from land to land. There is the opin color, hient into such beantiful harmony, and while the storm rages off there here lies palest of emerald waves, lapping the coast yonder and making the rocks all jusper, and the great sobbing sen is crashing itself into veritable anowbanks of whitest crystal. All these are there, but they are there because man is here. The meaning of this variance lies in yon and in me. If I look at either when my sonl is in one condition, I find a certain language. If I look there is unother maneut, I get a different language. These waves that come there yould with his in their reveley of joy, are they the lips of love that come with nil cultosiasm and prayerfulness, or are they the white lips of late? I do not know. It would be different to find a mare striking instance of precocity than Christian Heinektee, born at Lubeck in 1721 and died in 1725. At 10 months he spoke; et 1 year he knew tha principal elements of the Pentatecch; et 16 months the history of the Old Testament, and ut 14 months that of the New. At 2 years he ceplied to leading questions in geography and ancient and modern history, and soon, in addition to German—his native tongue—he spoke Latin and Freuch with facility. Before the commencement of his fourth year he knew the genealogies of the principal houses of Europe.—New York Advertiser.

RACE TO DEATH.

and the trustness of the day commenced. The aubalterns' cup was the first event, and, I must eay, the beys did crodit to the old Two Hundrodth. The senior subalterns were lying by for she regimental cup, and the juntors had the race to themselves. It was won by young Molesworth, whose round shoulders and unconquerably ugly seat had caused much conflict of opinion between him and the old riding master, but who now showed thut if he were not deslined to shine in the menage he had at any rate indisputable nerve and compth seat and hunds to take him over a difficult country. He afterward became one of our best near on a hurse and won equestrian honers in many teklish places. Then cause un hour's interval for lanch, but of course those who were going to ride-had to put the muztle on. I just looked into the tent before going to weigh and saw Mary Macartney, looking as sweet us ever. Seymour and Finch were bold with her, and sho was whising them good luck in fieler gallop. As they left her sately in the colonel's charge I heard her say: "Now, mind, I expery you two fo beat everybody else, and I shull be particularly nice to the one who wins. I may even give him fwo dances ut the casile ball tomorrow night."

The Two Hundrodth were pretty businessilks in mafters of sport, and there was naune of the fuse and delay in the weighing room that foo often marks the duings of amutter jockeys. Punctual to time, the starters filed unt of the paidock. I think there were eight of us. Seymour's colors were rose and black cap and Forestre were a long way the less of the runneers to look at Mousetrap and Screerer were a long way the less of the runneers to look at Mousetrap was a hig, bony bay horse, with rather a slack neck, but the best of shoulders, tremeuclous jumpling power and a green turn of speed. He required a workman to ride him, as his temper was easily refiled, but in Seymour's hands he generally went like u lamb. Sorceter was one of those exceptional horses that can take a turn at anything. He had gone through training in the riding school, and on occasions was the best of chargers. He was so good looking that when he had a military kif on thern was no terse in the regiment that looked more showy than he did, but the white lealer on his chestnut cost and the silvery looka lu his rail slowed Ga blood of old Wardek, and his bad a large share of the pace, clevetness and staying power that marked his great amoestor. As we rode down the course I could hear the few bookies who were present in the ring rockoning in the chances of the field in stenterian eries of "5 to 1, bar wee." I was riding in confidential old hunter which was warranted to stand up over the country, het I had only entered him chair or fan on the drive home.

We had a miserable time of alternate hopes and foars about our contrade, but in three days all was over. Finch was inconsolable, though fortunately seither hu nor any one else at the time knuw that he had been the cause of Beymour's death. It was always supposed that Monsetrop had kloked his master in his stroggless to recover himself when hu fell. I have unver told the real story till tonight, and you will not let it go furlier. Sir Thomas Finch is a great swell now, but I don't think he would learn without deep pain that, however innocently, he was the cause of the death vacancy by which he got tha troop that gave him this first start in his successful caroer.

What become of Mary Mascarimy? Oh, she is Lady Finch, and, 'pon my soul, I think she is atill as beautiful and charming as over.—Pall Mail Magazine.

No man is willing to blame himself.
He can commonly find some way of escape. He certainly will not acknowledge his fault until he had exhausted every effort to attribute it to ione one else. If caying that his partner or ma commen-tial clerk was dishonest.

So in domestic life, which never anglet to be distartised by a wave of trouble, that is froquently tengest based, no one finds himself at fault. If you reprove the son for using angry and disrespect-ful words to his father, he will embeaver to exonerate himself by speaking of this father's unjust and severe tisel-pline, if you reason with the father and argo a more gentle and considerate kind of treatment as being better adapted to

Ite noes not say, And for all powerful, and cament 1 do as 1 choose with mine own? but, Are not my ways equal? He challenges scrutny, he stimulates inquiry, and he gives such an exhibition of his administration as will go far lo answer these questions.

These impairies and objections may be answered one by one, making allowaness, as already lutinated, for our institution and the purposes of the influite one, and with thoroughness, but we have now time our inclination at gressen. We may simply say in passing that the rich cause of Christians suffered fur less from our cagerines of impury than fron the cause of Christians affered fur less from our cagerines of impury than fron the ty by reason of God's dealings will naukind in general and themselves in surticular. They have real difficulties particular. They have real dimentices. These arise against their wish until will. They desire above all things the simple, unquestioning faith of childhood, but with them to tilnk is to doubt, and relief is not to be found by turning back to an old faith, bat by pressing forwarf to a new one, even though it must be cought with tears.

cause of Christ has suffered far less from our eagernias of impury than from the exclusion of free thought and discussion by ecclesiostical and civil persecution. Our redecemer's kingdom is of Hight and not of durkness.

The local method, however, is that of the text. If appeals to those who have been especially under his core, and who have have had, therefore, the best opportunity for knowing him, for an answer, and with m implied assarance that it will be in favorable one.

'O hosse of Israel, are not my ways equal?' He seems to say! Review all my dealings with you one by one, t'onto a new one, even though it must be sought with tears.

This carneal and housest type of doalst should not be crushed. It is the germ of an intelligent belief. This questioning of eager and vigorous minds is not nearly age or people. Doubt is not manopolized by genins. There may one handless the tear of the property of the property of the tear of the many not be clearly expressed, but are known for the tearly expressed, but are known for the tearly expressed, and are known for the tearly expressed, but are thinker alone cruves the why mul wherefore of existing things, but practical means as their questions, too, and sections ones. It is easy to criticiso the individual acts of any administration, but if we would judge of it with fairness we must consider it in all its relations; we must consider it in all its relations; we must regard it on whole; we must try to as-certain its prevailing spirit and the namer in which this is expressed in laws and carried into effect by the exec-utive. We do make allowance in esti-ments, but should we in considering the divine? Ought it not in work per-fectly?

To some it comes without toil, without thought and ulmost without obsire. They do not use it sparingly or wisely. It bring a mather them nor others real good. Why does God grant to such aubounded wealth and deny it to us? Who has not asked this question again and again?

Then another form the question comes, it is this: Why are the apportunities for culture denied me? I can content myself without wealth. I care not for artificial social distinctions, but I crave apportunities for intellectual grawth. I used them to curich my own mind. I could the be of more service, to others. I believe I would use them wisely. Yet to know how many of us cames lack the answer, it cannot be. Few things are harder to bear than this form of disappointment, or more productive of doubt. The great occan stemmers now use some sort of a refrigerating plant that produces and circulates codd air instead of using large quantities of ice, as formerly. An exchange explains the principle on which lorge quantities of lee, as formerly. An exchange explains the principle on which this plant works, chilling by the rarelleation of compressed vapor. Fure anomain — int the "agin numerion" of commerce, but the gas—is direct subjected to a pressure with cwill reduce it to liquid form. Then it is libraried and sent through that cells of pipes resembling some of those used for steam heating. By a system of pumps and funs the air in the vessel's hold is exhausted grabbally, blown over the coli pipes and then freed back again. The pipees themselves are not extended through the corgs. An air librat does the work. As in some of the leenaking and cold storage plants in large cites, the auminolar vapor is cought, ted back, combined again and made to deservice over and over. Condensation is effected by means of a continuous cell immersal in cold sea water constantly changed. The only expense in operating, it will be seen, is for steam power after the plant is once started. A flow weeks ago in caper of beet, numton, systers, butter and other such goods was brought from Amstralla to Loundon, the vago regulring at least the orals weeks, and everything was found in prime condition.

The Making of Artificial Sitk.

An interesting operation was witnessed recently at firedford, England, when Dr. Frederick Lehner's process of making ortificial sitk was shown to a number of experis and others. The dren is not absolutely novel, but Dr. Lehner has not absolutely novel, in Dr. Lehner has not absolutely novel, in Dr. Lehner has not absolutely novel, in Dr. Lehner has rived at a happy solution of the difficulties be vided in the process and appears to have predicted as instance remarkable both for list texture and glossy appearance. The like frest were made up into various gloods, such as triumings, glup, sewing silk, hand kershiots and lengths of the material, the effect being excellent. Another merit of the artificial silk istinat it will stand washing and broning without an intention in these for or texture. The process through which the silk passes before artificial silk in the beginning purely cleanted, the vegetable fiber being by means of neids and alkalis concepted into collular tissue. The second part is mechanical and consists in signaturing the long threads into the textures. This inter process is cutomatic and once started goes on will out interruption. The experts by whom samples of the silk and calimates of the cost have been similated invoces filed that the materials are of good substance and quality, and the cost of production is very moderate.

Telescopes of the Future.

A noted English telescope inflier proposes that the great telescopes of the trun shall be meanted as an to float on a liquid support. In this way great the great electrons and refractors would move with a smoothness and steadings not attainable with originary supports and would be better adapted for photographing the heavens.

Paper Poles.

One of the butest uses to which paper is being put is the manufacture of telephone und telegraph poles. The pole is cast in a moid and comes out hollow of the desired length and slope. They are light and strong. The action of the elements, which causes the worsten pole to specially decay, it is said, does not affect these poles.

The Laying of Cornersinnes.

The custom of laying the cornersion of a public building with cornensies was practiced by the meleuts. We are told that, at the laying of the cornerstone, when the capital of Rome was rebuilt, a procession of vestal virgius robed in white surrounded the stone and consecrated it with ilbations of living water. A prayer to the gods foiluwed, and then the magistrates, priests, senators om kulights laid hold of the topes and towed the neighty stone to its proper position. In a boilow cut in the stone were piaced ingots of gold, silver and other metals which had not been melted la any furnace.

With the Jown the cornershate was considered an emblem of power, and they also performed ceremonies at its bying. In medicaral times the rite was taken up than order of Freensons and has by them been brength down to medern days. The Masonic ceremony of laying a currectonic is ayurboileal. The form of the stone, as aquaro no the anticac and a perfect enties its pixe, at the northeost corner of the stone, as aquaro no the anticac and a perfect enties its pixe, at the northeost corner of the stone, as caused in the state of the corners of the stone time, the stating it with a square, level and plumitand the pouring of librations of corn, when and oil over it, all have their iddien meaning.

Dostoletisky and the others calmly accepted their fate, and after a hurrird farowell to their more fortunate fellaws were conducted to their cells for the last time.

Some of the prisoners shept soundly, as though entirely unconcerned in the grim tragedy to be enected on the morrow. Not so Radovitch. From shie to side of his narrow cell, like some caged wild unitaal, he paced, listening the white intently for the footstep of the messenger that was to recall him to freedom und to the joys of life. The long night passed, all too quickly for him, for whem the messenger so unsecontuity delayed. He had seen General Garashimi to court from day to day, and once a glance of intelligence, he persunded binnself, had passed between them. It May Be a Very Important

This week has seen the birth of a brand own organization which is likely to form a rery important factor. In the general political sibration in Massachusetts.

The Massachusetts. Anti-Double-Trantion league is the natural autrewth of the efforts made for several years by many public-spirited gentlemen to redeem Massachusetts from the stigma of having the most fillheral system of taxalion of may sinte in the Union. Those gentlemen presented in the legislature of 1984 eigh of the most remarkable petitions ever undar, it contained the signatures of early 10,000 people; the manulmous requests of the 22 great trade organizations constituting this botton Associated thour of Trade; the suminous voto 63 similar preganizations ridel make my the Massachusetts Sinto

Speaking of Klassa.

There is a better market for kisses in Rochester than in Brooklyn. A young woman has just recovered a verdiet of $100 ngainst a man in the former city who had kissed her against her will, while the Brooklyn woman who sned a man for a similar infensa secured the conviction in this gully man and his sentence to may a flue of $100. The trothester girl got the kiss and $400, while the Brooklyn woman simply got the kiss.—Irrooklyn Eagle.

Scattered averywhere within a radius of 60 miles of Philadelphia one runs across the hideone voting booths which formerly disfigured the streets of the city ut election time, and which were sold for a mere song. On the mountains about Reading and along tront streams in different parts of the state they are need as camping huts, while along the New Jersey coast, from Cape May to Long Branch, they are found fitted up as summer residences by the sea. Originally there were 678 of these booths, costing the sity $225 cach. Over 600 of them were sold et prices ranging from $3.10 to $15.60 cach, at asgreat less to the city.—Philadelphia Record. A SAD ROMANCE.

There was an interesting romanecemacted at Lakeshie hospital, and it ended with the death of one, a young woman's broken heart and a mother's satisfaction in preventing a marriage which was the last wish of her dying son.

Willie Hizer, the fireuan of No. I hook and ladder, who was thrown from the top of the truck, was taken to the hospital. The near wheels of the truck, that weighs five tons, passed over his breast and caused fatul highries. Five years ago Hizer's wife died and left him to care for a little boy who was then of years old. During the past one or two years Hizer had kept company with a pleasing young woman of the name of Annia McGintric, who makes her home with a family on Hoyt wesne. The coupl's were engaged to be married, and the date for the eremony was fixed for three weeks hence.

When the womaded and dying man was placed un a bed in a hospital, he asked for Annie. She was sent for, and so was his mother. They both urrived ut about the same time, and when they approached the deathbed the dying man was placed un a bed in a thospital, he asked for Annie. She was sent for, and so was his mother. They both urrived ut about the same time, and when they approached the deathbed the dying man asked for Annie. She was sent for, and so was his mother. They both urrived ut a both the same time, and when they approached the deathbed the dying man asked for Annie of the would marry him mider such circumstances. He said: "It has been the would have been tited, but there was no hice he boy, who was then estanding by the bedshie. Both parties being of one mind, they called a Cutholio priest, Father Vahey of St. John's cathedral responded, and npon his appearance the dying man's mother created a seene in the ward and became so lond in protesting squint the marriage livet she would have been tied, but there was no license, and the priest would not pronounce the cerementy without it. Giving the dying man words of confort, hadepared from the hospital. The couple then asked ous of the firem who stood by to telep

A few days since a fall grown goat was quietly browsing on the shore of Star lake, at Palaetta leach, when a large utiligator, fully 10° feet long, was seen by several persons to anddonly energe from the reeds, and with one siroke of the ponderous jawe hit the goat in hulf. He disappeared for a few minutes and was then seen to rise ogain and take the other half of the animal, that had been left on the shore.—Palutka Advertiser.

Waterproof collars and cuffa that will not wilt, are not effected by moisture and look just like linen are all the fashion now. They are made by covering a lines collar or cuff with "cclubilid" and are the only waterproof goods made with an interliaing, consequently the only ones that will stand wear and give perfect satisfaction. Try them and you will never regret it. Always neat, and easily cleaned. When soiled simply wipe off with a wet cloth or appage. Every piece of the genuina is stamped as follows:

HE WAS MEEK.

A short story tilherratica the Power of Wooda.

A small, beordless and inoffensive little man cano into one of our stores the other day in company with a woman of 5 feet 11, whose look and monuer indicated thot she had engerly signed the tedition to strike the disgusting word "malu" out of that part of the constitution of New York referring to the variety privileges of its residents.

"We want to get a nockthe," she said to the clerk.

"A red one," put in the little aid man pleadingly.

"A black one, sir," said the woman, with scorn and decision in her volce, and then she wail nader her breath, "Let met calch you with a red necktio co, James Higgine!"

A black the was bought, and the woman sall, with a jerk of her elbow in the direction of her hashand:

"A hondkerchief for him, please."

"I'd like them kind that has hesses heads in the border," he said.

"James Higgine," snapped out his wife, "you losin the filito sense you ever did have? Hosses heads for a man of your years an a deacon in the Baptise dianch at the You'll have a plain red figgered bandaner, sann as you've altes had."

When this was bought, the old man arked to look et some "galluses," but belore the elver could fathom the meaning of the word the old fady said:

"No, you don't, James! You min't were home knit s'pendere all your life to come out in eters bought canes in your old age. You needu't take any down, Mr. Clerk. Next thing you know he'll be want a atore shirt 'stid u' the good cubleached muslin ones t'vo made 'im lor 40 years back. THE EMBDEN GEESE

The Emblem Variety is Falely Froilise.

And Mafores Early—A Receding Fra.

There are only three varieties of geess which can be called conomical. It is true we have several varieties, that the majority are so inferior to he three leading breeds—Emblen, Tonlouse and Italian—that they cannot be called profitable treeds, anys a breeder in Than Kennel, Farun and Ponditry Yard.

The Emblem goose is by far tha most beautiful of the species, it is a very large varbety, pure white in color, and very handsome. In a large flock on the grass or stubbles they look extremely well.—The Emblem gander should have a long, awantifue neck; long, straight head; deep orange bill and light line eyes. His breast should be full and breach, without any keel; shoulders very broad, lack long and straight, pameh deep and breach, and legs very strong.

The Emblem gand straight, pameh deep and breach, and legs very strong.

The Emblem gard strive prolific. They lay about 15 eggs each if fairly fed, and make good sitters and mothers.

They are indeed most satisfactory in the s which will last, so the court inform

Pour half a plut of boiling milk, sweetened, into a lassin containing two well whisked eggs. Stir the lugredients, put them into a clean saucepan and stir steadily over the fire until a thick enstard is produced, taking earn it does not tooll, or it wild be spoiled. Remove from the fire null put a side null cold; then aid half a plut of whipped cream to the custard and either a little liquor or a teaspoonful of vanillar essence. Ascertain that the uniture is sweet enough and add some dried cherries and plue apple out into small deces and a few latter respect. Great laying in goese is uet to my infind any recommendation. I prefer a goose that will lay a good sitting—say from 12 to 15 eggs—and then sit down and hatch them and tring off her flock to the fields as soon as they can be trusted to rambio far from home. Gress of this class give very little trouble compared with birds brought up by theirs which lay ubout the farmyard all summer.

The Embdens are an early maturing variety, and as soch have been largely recommended as harvest goese. Their fiesh is excellent and without any coarseness. They are frequently crossed with Toulouse, which produces excellent results. This cross makes very large birds of a light gray color. The gamders grow particolarly large. A gander and two or three geege make a breeding pen. I prefer to note only two geese with n gander. The gander, as before stated, should be as long in the neek and typical of the breed appossible. I would advise the first foar eggs laid by each goese to be put under heus, and the geese will be able for about 13 eggs each. They should have nests provided in a shed, where they should, be put to lay from the lirst. I don't believe in changing a goose from the nest she has laid be, because she way't take to n new nest, as a rule. them into shape.

How Arrists' Models Are Paid.

The regular rate in the art schools is 8312 cents an hoar, or $10 a week for six days' work of four hours each. If no complaints are made by the net student or class monitor, the model gets a 25 ter cent premium. "Good days" are few and far apart, for the poses are 25 minutes long, with only two minutes' rest, and in difficult positions more than human mature can endure. To get off the pose an instant or to keep it in a lazy manuer provokes complaint, and although the crooker may be the veriest hungler it counts against the poor mod-mended by L. R. Jones of the Vercuont station for both the early and the late bilghi. Several fungicides were tested, but the bordenux mixime give best results. Among the most interesting results were gains where soap was added to the fungicide. In the million's odinlon, the difference may be attributed largely in the effect of the soap upon the flea beetles rather than to its increased lungicidal action. Nuascroas leaves were taken at random and carefully counted, and those to which the soul had been applied showed a great reduction in the massler of punctures by this luseet.

The time and rate of growth of jectato tubers, and hence the effect of the premature death of petato tops upon the yield, was investigated, and it was shown that the yield of matketable tabers increased with the different dates of diggling until Oct. I. The rows used in this test had been thoroughly sprayed with bordeava mixture, and the plants remained green autil the end of September. Chartestings were made, is glinning. It is hard to get it out of the head f some furmers that straw has belte ses than lo be rolled, down merely for Its manufol value. They use it libra-ly as bedding, so as to save more of the liquid exerciment which will otherwi-be wasted. Hut after ull has been use do not know what to do with. They can safely sell it, if for every load taken away they buy a load of manure. The manure tray cost $1 a load, white the straw ought to sell for $5 to $5 or $10, according to size of load and quality of the straw. Yet in every case the head of manure has more of plant food than has the users bully straw. It is not uncommon for farmer in some places to forbish straw for bedding to those keeping horsen or cows in neighboring villages. It is a very good plan where the distance for healing both ways is not too great. There are always some horses kept in village hotels, and it is worth while for farmers to make arrangements for exchanging straw for their bedding for the manuro pile that they will produce, according to American Cultivator.
